

Signal Flags

Signal Flags are a vital part of maritime communication, allowing vessels to send messages quickly and clearly when radio or voice communication isn't possible. Each flag represents a specific letter, number, or message and can be used alone or in combination to convey important information such as navigation instructions, warnings, or distress signals.

Governed by the International Code of Signals (ICS), these flags are essential for maintaining safety, coordination, and situational awareness at sea.

Standard Size: 1500 x 1000 mm
